BOTH SIDES TALK.

Blaine and Harrison Shouters Active at Minneapolis, and Both Working for Their Favorites.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 3.—Issues in the great fight for the republican presidential nomination may be said to have been joined. Many of the delegates and prominent men in the party from all over the country are already here. So far as talk is concerned neither side has much the better of the other. Shout loudly as the Blaine men say, the Harrison people strive and strike a note a pitch or two higher. Thus far little besides talking is being done. There are but few delegates here on which to use the powers argumentative and persuasive, which the leaders know so well how to wield. So the big chiefs spend their time making boasts and telling what will be done and how their favorite will win.

R. R. Shiels, of the Indiana delegation, after talking over the situation with his conferees, laughed at the idea of Harrison being beaten. "Why, the talk of these people amuses me," he said. "They are practically at their wit's end. It is no longer Blaine, but anybody to beat Harrison. They know they cannot nominate Blaine. If they do not know that they cannot beat Harrison, they have had no benefit from all their practical political experience. Their candidate is a myth."

Nearly all the members of the executive committee of the national committee are now here, including Clarkson, Fassett, Payne, A. L. Conger, H. S. Hyde, John C. Sanborn, Samuel Fessenden and Chauncey I. Filley. The most important work to be done by the executive committee, which will hold its first formal meeting Saturday, will be the selection of the temporary chairman for the convention. It seems tolerably certain now that J. Sloat Fassett, of New York, will be named for the position. He is the choice of Clarkson and most of the national committee. He is also a Blaine man, as are most of the committeemen. Ex-Czar Tom Reed, of Maine, not being a delegate, is ineligible for the place in the opinion of Chairman Clarkson.

The Blaine men are not so confident that they can stampede the convention merely by the magic of Blaine's name, powerful though it be; so it is suggested that the Blaine leaders do missionary work among the delegations as rapidly as the latter arrive. The point and weighty import of this propaganda will be that Harrison cannot be elected if nominated. From New York will come Tom Platt, J. Sloat Fassett and their cohorts, who will whisper in each delegates ear that Harrison cannot carry the Empire state and that his nomination means defeat for the part. Clarkson, Thurston and other Iowa and Nebraska magnates will tell how hard a row the republicans will have to hoe in both these states, now having democratic administrations. That Harrison will lose Iowa and maybe Nebraska will be dinned into the ears of the Iowa delegates instructed for Harrison. More eloquently put and more persistently urged will be the plea for Blaine's nonination on the ground that with him as the nominee both states would be safe.

Up from Illinois will come the leaders of the element that at Springfield tried to keep the president from recognition by the state convention. These to the uninstructed delegates will explain the danger to party success in that state if anybody but Blaine is nominated. Henry Payne and his lieutenants from Wisconsin will have a similar story to tell of impending defeat there should Harrison be nominated. Duffield and the other Alger boomers will aid Senator Stockbridge's Blaine boom by showing the delegates how in Michigan disaster will follow Harrison's and victory Blaine's nomination. Thus the delegates who prefer party success to personal ambition will be scared into voting for Blaine. This is the plan of the Blaine people as outlined by one of the most ardent and best-informed Blaine men in Minneapolis.

The Blaine boom has not yet made its appearance. There is some solicitude over this fact, but it is not denied even by the rabid Blaine men that the boom is late in appearing.

Senator Washburne gave a little Blaine dinner at his palatial residence, "Fair Oaks," last night, at which Clarkson, Fassett, Payne and the other sub committeemen, who are just now the custodians of the Blaine boom, were honored during the evening. Those who were present are rather reticent about the proceedings and maintain that it was simply a little social gathering. It is considered significant that none of Washburne's friends in the Harrison camp were invited, and it is generally believed that the Blaine plan of campaign was very carefully mapped out.

It was determined to open up Blaine headquarters somewhere as a sort of center of influences from which the workers can draw inspiration and instruction. This action will be taken secretly and not openly. The determination to force Blaine into the fight and keep him there is making the Harrison managers more and more bitter. They are getting exceedingly sensitive and touch. Behind every tree they see a Blaine spook stalking. As an instance of that is cited the kick that has just been registered by John C. New and his supporters against the big club mass meeting to be held in the convention hall Tuesday evening just after the convention assembles. The Harrisonians profess to have discovered in this a big scheme to boom Blaine just when it would do the most good. They assert that the sub committee refused to permit the meeting unless it could name the speakers. This was conceded by President John Goodnow, of the Minnesota state league of clubs, whose pet idea is that the mass meeting was for the spreading of republican doctrines in the northwest. It has now been announced that one of the principal speakers will be Governor Forsker, of Ohio, who is one of the leaders of the anti-Harrison movement. This fact is considered by the Harrisonians significant purpose to start a great big Blaine boom just after the convention has assembled.

John C. New and A. L. Conger, the Ohio Blaine leader, had a bit an encounter in one of the corridors of the West hotel last night. There has been bad blood between these two men, who were formerly good friends, but who have been separated by forces of political circumstances. They had been talking at each other through the newspapers a good deal, but until last night had not met. "I know what is the matter with you, Conger," said New. "You did not get your man appointed postmaster at Akron. That is all there is to it, and that is the only explanation of your anti-Harrison attitude." Conger replied indignantly, and the talk ran pretty high, though both gentlemen kept their tempers.

The Harrison followers held an informal caucus last night at the West but nothing definite was done pending the arrival of the remainder of the Indiana delegation today. A meeting of the delegation is scheduled for tomorrow. It is now given out that J. Sloat Fassett, of New York, has declined the temporary chairmanship which had been informally tendered him by the sub committee. He preferred not to banish himself from the floor of the convention after the opening hours. The national committee will likely meet tomorrow to settle on the man.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—A gentleman who is close to the president and who enjoys his confidence, is authority for the statement that if Mr. Blaine does not withdraw from the nomination race, Harrison will. He says that if by Saturday night Mr. Blaine has not written a letter again declining the use of his name in the Minneapolis convention he will have practically admitted that he is a candidate. Mr. Harrison will then feel it his duty to magnanimously withdraw from the contest. He will, it is said, write a letter to that effect.

A gentleman close to the president gives the inside of Mr. Harrison's and Mr. Blaine's relations with each other. Before Mr. Blaine came to New York he called on the president and in substance said to him: "In connection with my visit to New York you will probably hear that it has a political meaning. A construction may be put on it that will please neither you nor me. I wish to say to you that I am not a candidate for nomination and I hope you will not credit any of these stories that are flying about." To these words Mr. Harrison is said to have replied: "I am much gratified at your open dealing with me. I had supposed you felt this way toward a nomination, although some persons have tried to persuade me differently." The interview between the president and his secretary of state was not a long one and they parted in the most friendly manner.

Senator Eugene Hale, of Maine, a close friend of Secretary Blaine, told a correspondent yesterday that Mr. Blaine will certainly accept if nominated. The secretary of state, Mr. Hale declared, will remain passive and allow things to take their own course.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 3.—A friend of Consul General New says that the latter told him just before leaving for Minneapolis that President Harrison was not at all worried over the efforts of Blaine's friends to force him upon the party as a candidate, and that Harrison has a personal letter from Blaine that would settle the matter in a moment if he should make it public. New said Harrison would not give it to the press because he believed he would be nominated without a struggle and it was unnecessary to inject any personal matters into the campaign for the nomination. Besides, he feels that he is entitled to an expression from the convention unbiased by any such influences, and he proposes to stand or fall by his record. New also said that the letter reiterated Blaine's determination not to be a candidate and there could be no mistake about it, for he had seen and read the letter. The Harrison men say the president sustains a very different relation to the convention from that of other supposed candidates, for while Alger or Sherman might feel it a compliment to be nominated even after Blaine had secured the plum and thrown it from him, Harrison could not afford to do so, for it would make him the laughing stock of the country.

WILL NOT ACCEPT.

Sir John Thompson Don't Aspire to the Arbitratorship of Canada.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 3.—Sir John Thompson has not accepted the position of British representative in the Behring Sea arbitration which has been offered to him by Lord Salisbury, and it is doubtful whether he will do so. It is felt in political circles that it would be unwise for one who is practically the chief advocate of Canada to take such a position, because if the decision of the arbitrary powers, France and Sweden should be in favor of the United States, Canada's situation would be one of deep humiliation.

The Blaine club will start for Minneapolis Sunday at 1:30 p. m.

IN THE KEYSTONE STATE.

Three Boys and One Girl Struck by Lightning—A Train Runs Into a Landslide.

SCRANTON, Pa., June 3.—A terrific thunder storm played havoc throughout Lackawanna county last night. It began in the early evening and continued until 3 o'clock this morning. Three boys and one girl were struck by lightning. Two were killed, and the others fatally injured. When the storm first came up two Polish boys, Joseph and Casmir Chonicsky, were caught beneath a large oak tree in South Scranton. Casmir was part of the way up the tree, while Joseph was standing underneath when the lightning struck. Joseph was instantly killed, and Casmir was set on fire by the electric fluid. He caught one of the limbs of the tree and was frightfully burned before aid could reach him. He died this morning. In the Hyde Park section a three-year-old son of Sylvester Arnold was struck and his injuries are regarded as fatal. At Elmhurst, seven miles east of this city, a girl named Andrews, while seeking shelter under a tree, was killed by a thunder bolt. Heavy landslides occured on the Delaware and Hudson and the Ontario and Western roads, which delayed trains until this morning.

FRANKLIN, Pa., June 3. A passenger train on the Allegheny Valley railroad, due here at 6.20 last evening, ran into a landslide eight miles below this city, and the engine and two baggage cars were thrown into the river. Fortunately the passenger coaches remained on the track and a terrible accident was averted. Alexander Road, the engineer, was fatally injured, and the express messengers had both legs broken. Three other employes were slightly injured.

WESTERN UNION'S VICTORY.

Decision Against the Bell Telephone Company Involving $12,000,000.

BOSTON, June 3—An important decision, adverse to the American Bell Telephone company, was rendered yesterday by United States Judge Colt in favor of the Western Union Telegraph company. The suit was for one-fifth of the capital stock of numerous corporations operating telephones throughout the United States. The gross amount claimed by the telegraph company is about $12,000,000.

The contract forming the basis of the suit was made in 1879 between various corporations operating telephones and the Western Union company on the one side and the Bell Telephone company. The question was whether the contract required the Bell company to pay 20 per cent. on all sums received, or only on profits made. The case was heard by Judge Lowell as master, and objection was made to an irregularity in filing his report. The report was by agreement withdrawn. The master refused to hear additional evidence. Thereupon the plaintiff moved to dismiss the bill with costs. This motion was earnestly opposed, but is now granted without prejudice, which gives the plaintiff the right to try its case over again.

GIVING ODDS ON HARRISON.

The President the Favorite With the Sporting Men at New York.

NEW YORK, June 2.—The possibilities for speculation on the result of the Minneapolis convention are attracting the attention of sporting men. The uncertainty of the outcome has led to a few pretty good-sized bets, the largest being of $2,000 to $1,500 that Harrison will be nominated against all comers. An ex-congressman from the south took the Harrison end of it. Another bet was $1,000 even that Blaine would not be nominated and $600 that he would not accept it if he was. Lots of small bets from $50 to $600 have been laid, and Harrison seems to have the biggest following. The sporting men, who are usually good judges of political contests, are largely in favor of Harrison and are betting their money that way. Blaine supporters are putting up their money on him on faith, and are confident of winning. Lots of money will be wagered in the next few days on both.

HER FRIENDS ALARMED.

Mrs. Harrison Grown Worse in the Past Few Days.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—The many friends of Mrs Harrison are alarmed at the report that she has grown worse within the last few days. The report proves to be true, but it is not believed that Mrs. Harrison is in any immediate danger. There is no doubt that she is extremely ill, so ill in fact that it has been deemed unwise to attempt to move her to the Cap May cottage. It has been found necessary in order that Mrs. Harrison should have absolute quiet to order the Marine band, which has for years played on Saturdays in the White house grounds, to play hereafter in Lafayette park.

PEOPLE'S PARTY GAINS.

Nebraska, South Dakota and Kansas To Be Delivered to Them.

SIOUX CITY, Iowa, June 3.—Mr. M. F. Harrington, a prominent democratic politician of northern Nebraska, said in an interview yesterday that orders have been issued from the democratic headquarters that Nebraska, South Dakota and Kansas must be delivered over to the people's party. In Nebraska, he added, the democrats will nominate no electoral ticket this year. The democrats will have their own state ticket but will support the alliance electoral ticket. The same will be done in the other states mentioned and while the democrats will gain nothing the republicans will lose in what has been heretofore their stronghold. The election will be thrown into the house of representatives.

RESEMBLE HANGED.

Leaving His Bondsmen and Creditors in the Lurch.

ROME, Ga., June 3.—Walter Beresford, or Sidney Lascelles, who was under $5,000 bonds for trial on charges of obtaining money by means of forged checks, has fled, leaving his bondsmen and other creditors in the lurch. He is said to owe about $10,000 to various persons who trusted him. His wife, a daughter of the New York millionaire tobacco merchant, Lillienthall, has returned to her parent's home in Yonkers, N. Y. Beresford is supposed to have gone to Mexico. He claims to be a relative of the famous Lord Charles Beresford, of England, but has been accused of being a mere adventurer. He was engaged in the brokerage business at Rome.

DOUBLE MURDER AND SUICIDE.

Farmer Taylor Shoots His Wife and His Neighbor and Then Himself.

BENTON, Ill., June 3.—A double murder and suicide occurred at Needmore, a small village in the extreme northwestern part of this county yesterday. Moses Taylor and T. Foster own adjoining farms, and for some time Taylor has been suspicious of Foster, thinking he had been paying too much attention to his wife. The men met yesterday and hot words ensued, whereupon Taylor shot Foster dead. Mrs. Taylor, seeing the crime committed, fled to Foster's house for protection but her husband followed her there and shot her dead. Taylor then shot and killed himself. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor leave four children. Foster was unmarried and kept house with his mother.

THE FLOOD SUBSIDES.

Houses Filled With Mud and the Contents Ruined.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 3.—The floods which have prevailed in this locality for three days began to subside yesterday, and the waters along the streams have found their way into the channels, leaving the submerged houses filled with mud three inches deep. When the occupants returned yesterday they found everything ruined, the beds, carpets and chairs covered with a thick coating of mud, the gravel streets entirely washed out and the brick pavements undermined and worthless until relaid. The damage to the additions to the city alone is reckoned at not less than $100,000, nearly all of which must be borne by the laboring classes.

ALL FOR LOVE.

A Deserted Woman Shoots Her Former Lover and Commits Suicide.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 3.—Last night Miss Maggie Sullivan, a domestic employed in a residence in the western part of the city, sent a note to a former lover named Peter McCreech, at 4027 Fairfax avenue, requesting him to meet her at a point about two blocks from his home. When McCreech met the woman she upbraided him for deserting her and and marrying another woman. After a few words Miss Sullivan drew a revolver and fired two shots at McCreech, one of the bullets lodging in his brain and inflicting a probably fatal wound. The woman then fired a bullet into her right temple, killing herself almost instantly.

BY MASKED MEN.

A Montana Stage Coach Overhauled by Highwaymen.

BILLINGS, Mont., Jun. 3.—The Billings and Great Falls stage was held up by masked men yesterday and the treasure box and mail sacks taken after one horse was shot. The passengers were not molested and were allowed to proceed with the remaining horse. The robbery occurred at Painted Robe Hill, nine miles south of the Muscle Shell river. A sheriff's posse was dispatched from Billings on the arrival of the coach last evening.

RECTOR AHLWARDT ARRESTED.

The Government Will Put Down the Anti-Jewish Agitation.

BERLIN, June 3.—The arrest of Rector Ahlwardt, who made the charge that Loewe & Co., the rifle manufacturers, had defrauded the German government by furnishing defective rifles to the army, is regarded as evidence that the government means to put down the anti-Jewish agitation, of which Ahlwardt is the chief promoter.

HON. JOS. H. MANLEY

Will Succeed General Haynes on the National Committee.

AUGUSTA, Me., June 3.—Hon. Joseph H. Manley has been elected by the state committee to fill the vacancy in the republican national committee occasioned by the resignation of Gen. J. Manchester Haynes. The resignation and Mr. Manley's credentials have been forwarded by Chairman Clarkson at Minneapolis.

A LEGAL HOLIDAY.

The Anniversary of Jeff Davis' Birth Observed in Florida.

PALATKA, Fla., June 3.—By grace of the last session of the legislature Jefferson Davis' birthday anniversary is now a legal holiday in Florida, and today is its first observance.

The Texas to be Launched.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—The Texas, which has been under construction for so long a time at the Norfolk navy yard, is at last to be launched and the date fixed by the secretary of the navy is June 25, at noon.

The Troops Removed.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., June 3.—The state militia has been removed from the Oliver Spring mines with a view to a peaceful settlement of the troubles in the mining regions.

ANTI-CHRISTIAN.

The War Against Christianity in China is Inevitable—Great Excitement Prevails.

LONDON, June 4.—A dispatch from Shanghai says that considerable apprehension is felt of a renewal of the anti-foreign agitation. Placards of a strongly anti-Christian character have been posted up at Wusung, and even worse placards are posted in Hunan. The center of the movement seems to be in the lower province.

The Hall of Lent society, of Changhai, the capital of the province of Hunan, is frequented by the higher officials of the province, by natives of the place, many of whom are officials elsewhere and who are at home on leave, and by the usual horde of expectant officials who have obtained mandarian rank by examination or otherwise, but have not received employment. Here the anti-Christian agitation is fomented.

The excitement grows by constant discussion, new comers from all parts of the country bringing fresh fuel to the flame and at length the members of the club enter into the extraordinary human compact, the text of which has been published.

To pay the expense of disseminating anti-foreign literature the rich members subscribe large sums—eight of them paying in equal shares for the printing and distributing of 800,000 copies of one pamphlet—the poorer ones giving their personal services by writing or illustrating the placards and pamphlets so that the man who can not read can at least understand from the pictures.

That officials are in sympathy with the agitation is shown by the fact that the pamphlets and placards are for the most part printed and distributed from yamen shops, which, though nominally private institutions, are really owned by officials to whom licenses are granted to carry on the business.

The literature just completed is disseminated all over the districts adjoining the Yang Tse, the placards everywhere in the town, and side by side with official proclamations on the walls of the public departments. These pamphlets are circulated by hundreds of thousands amongst an ignorant and superstitious population. Meanwhile the central government at Pekin remains silent and indifferent to the danger.

AT THE HOFFMAN HOUSE.

The Chicago Delegates of the February Convention to Meet Tuesday.

NEW YORK, June 3.—It is reported that Chairman Murphy, of the democratic state central committee, has summoned the delegates elected to Chicago by the February convention to meet him at the Hoffman house in New York City next Tuesday. It is said that he intends to emphasize the instructions given them at the convention regarding the support of Hill for the presidency.

ALBANY, N. Y., June 3.—On good authority, the source of which at present cannot be published, it is asserted here today that at the meeting in New York Monday of the February delegation, it will be proposed that in case the national committee refuses to admit any portion of the contesting delegates the regular delegates will stay by Mr. Hill, but if admitted the delegates are to change their allegiance to Roswell P. Flower, discarding both Mr. Hill and Mr. Cleveland. The proposition is to be submitted to the contesting delegation.

AMERICAN COTTON

ST. PETERSBURG, June 3.—Six hundred bales of cotton, unloaded from the German ship J. Weisenhorn, which left New Orleans March 3 for this port, arriving on May 10, and from the Norwegian bark Vivax, which left Charleston March 28, and arrived May 20, took fire on the wharf. Before the flames were extinguished many of the bales were destroyed and all were damaged to some extent.

PALACIOS FORCES

Again Defeated and Are in Full Retreat.

VALENCIA, Venezuela, June 3.—An important battle has been fought near this town and resulted in the defeat of President Palacio's forces. Terrific fighting occurred all along the line and the route of the government troops was most complete. They are in full retreat toward this city. Ex-President Rojas Paul has come out openly in favor of the rebellion. He has gone to Curacao.

ANOTHER COLLISION.

The Schooner Magnet Goes to the Bottom.

DETROIT, Mich., June 3. Another river collision occurred near Wyandotte last night. The schooner Magnet, one of the tow of the steam barge Grover Steward, bound up with lumber, was run into by the schooner Glenora, which was in another tow, and sank in fifteen feet of water. She lies near the steamer Progress, which was sunk Wednesday night. The Magnet is owned by W. E. Rice, of Buffalo.

CHILIAN AFFAIRS.

The Cabinet Resigns—Juan McKenna Becomes an American Citizen.

VALPARAISO, June 3.—At the election yesterday for officers of the chamber of deputies the cabinet candidates were overwhelmingly defeated. The cabinet will, in consequence, resign. Minister Egan has received a letter from Juan McKenna, one of Balmaceda's chief advisers, and who is now in the United States stating that he had applied for citizen's papers.

WHERE THE MONEY GOES

The Amount of Taxes Collected in Allen County and How It Is Distributed.

Deputy Auditor M. J. Houlihan has just completed the semi-annual tax report showing the amount of taxes collected in Allen county and how the money is distributed. It shows a sum considerably larger than that of the corresponding installment of last year, due to the increased valuation of property and to the creation of two new funds, viz., the benevolent institutions and soldiers' and sailors' monument.

The report shows that taxes collected by County Treasurer Reckman for the year 1891, amounted to $258,716.55, which are distributed in the different funds as follows:

State, $28,188.07.
Benevolent institutions, $12,969.35.
Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument, $1,080.77.
State school, $37,261.14.
Permanent endowment fund to Indiana universities, $1,087.70.
County tax, $84,111.67.
Township tax, $6,981.57.
Local tuition, $1,484.09.
Special school, $30,685.82.
Road tax, $26,574.11.
Dog tax, $1,744.32.
Gravel roads, $3,279.30.
County bonds, $6,624.66.
Special road, $2,109.01.
New court house, $7,565.39.

PROVING THYSELF.

Rev. Floyd Tomkins at Trinity Episcopal Church.

Rev. Floyd W. Tomkins, of Chicago, delivered a lecture under the auspices of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, at Trinity church last evening. Rev. Tomkins can be put down as one of the most forcible speakers that has visited our city for many a day. He took for his subject the seventeenth chapter of First Samuel, thirty ninth verse. The first part of his lecture was devoted to the early life of David, illustrating his wonderful faith, and showing that he never relied on self. He said forcibly, it is the same with us today. If we want to be strong, we must rely on Christ for help. We can do nothing of ourselves. We must go to Christ continually in prayer, and not stop with praying, but we must work as well as pray. He said he knew Christians who relied too much on prayer, and were continually asking the Lord to give them strength to do certain things, when they had sufficient strength and power themselves, if they would only go to work and do it. They were continually getting ready to do something, but never seemed to reach the starting point. He instructed his hearers to stand up at all times for the right. Be a man. Not only a man with coat and pants, but a man who can always be found on the right side of everything. At the party, when the young lady tempts you with the glass of wine, have the courage to say no. When the Sunday saloon or Sabbath desecration is talked about and brought to your notice, do not pass it by, feeling that you are not interested or concerned in it. If you are on Christ's side, you must be brave and speak out your sentiments for the right at all times. Do not be cowards. At Chicago we have had a hard fight for the Lord's day, but we are standing firm and will not give an inch. If the gambler, in any form, approaches you, speak out your sentiments against this great sin with no uncertain sound. Know only one way and that the right way. Let your character for right be known all over the city. Let all men know just where you stand and where you can be found. Do not live merely for the purpose of making a living for yourself and your family, but live to benefit others. This life will soon pass away and when you come before the Lord to prove your works, your career, your walk, have something that you know will meet with His favor. The speaker closed with a strong plea for his hearers to live close to Christ and do everything in their power to bring others in His sunshine and happiness.

A SIX-YEAR-OLD MURDERESS.

A Colored Child Kills Her Baby Sister With a Club.

DANVILLE, Ga., June 3.—At Atoko, a village five miles from here, Mose Bottom's six year old daughter killed her eighteen months old sister. She beat out the child's brains and broke its neck with a piece of stove wood. The child seemed to bear some hatred to her baby sister. Only a few days ago she had smashed its finger and toe nails with a hatchet.

REGARDING THE READING.

A Rumor Afloat that Mr. Morgan Has Sold Out.

LONDON, June 3.—Two important rumors created considerable disturbance today in American railroad circles. One was that Mr. Morgan had disposed of his interest in Reading. Another report that caused no little agitation was that the Denver dividend had been passed.

THOMAS J. STEPHENS DEAD.

The Ex-Mayor of Cincinnati Expired Last Night.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, June 3.—Ex-Mayor Thomas J. Stephens died last night aged sixty nine. He was mayor of this city at the time of the riots in 1884, but at that time he was confined to his house by sickness.

Fatal Accident to a Boy.

BELLEFOX, June 3.—Carl Coser, aged seven years, the youngest son of Wm. Ewa Coser, the county treasurer, fell from the office window of the court house yesterday morning, a distance of fifteen feet, alighting on his head and shoulders, fracturing his skull, breaking one arm and is otherwise injured. He can not live.

NO 9 STRUCK HIM!

And Now He Must Die—Sad Fate of Rudolph Allman—A Child's Broken Arm.

Shortly after 6 o'clock last evening Rudolph Allman, a German, in the employ of Contractor William Moellering, was crossing the tracks of the Pittsburg road, near the Lafayette street crossing, when he was struck by No 9, a fast passenger train, west bound. He was tossed by the pilot up against the locomotive and then thirty feet into the air. He was quickly picked up and taken to the watchman's tower, where Dr. J. E. Miller attended his injuries. Upon the arrival of the patrol wagon he was conveyed to Hops hospital in an unconscious condition. There it was found by Dr. G. C. Stemen that the right side of the skull was fractured, Dr. W. W. Barnett was called in consultation and the delicate operation of trephining was performed with the assistance of Drs Bramigk and Crouse. His recovery is very doubtful.

A BABY LOST.

The eight-year old daughter of F. A. Pelgen, of 95 Baker street, fell and fractured its arm last evening.

COURT DOCKETS.

The News of the Day as Found in the County Courts and the Justice Offices.

Judge Dawson was holding superior court this morning and dismissed the cases of Mary Ebby against Caroline Haller and Wm. H. Shumbaugh against Lavina Rose. Judgment was taken in several cases.

The case of Roeger vs. Von Open, to foreclose a lien on a farm in Jefferson township, was disposed of in the circuit court yesterday. C. S. Hayes for the plaintiff, S. M. Hench for defendant.

The last will of Wilson Ludwick has been filed and the estate is bequeathed to his son, Wilson Ludwick.

The two cases of the state against Alva and A. J. Rich, for an aggravated assault and battery, have been dismissed in the circuit court. S. M. Hench was attorney for defendants.

Last evening, at his office, Justice Ryan united in marriage John Miller and Margaret Keck.

Daniel Overly was arrested last night on a peace warrant, sworn out by his wife, and taken before Justice Ryan. Overly was crazed with liquor and went home in a desperate mood, abusing his wife and threatening to kill her. He was sent to jail to await a hearing at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Adolph Brecht was before Justice France on the charge of assaulting John Shepler, the tailor, and was fined $1 and costs. Brecht had been in the employ of Shepler, but a difficulty having occurred between to two, he quit his service. Last night Mr. Shepler found his windows covered with mud and he accused Brecht of having done it. This led to the difficulty.

The case of Keiller against Folger continues to occupy the attention of Judge O'Rourke and a jury in the circuit court. The plaintiff, Minnie Keiller, is endeavoring to break the will of her deceased father, by which, she claims, she was not given her just share of the estate. James Robinson, Judge W. G. Colerick and Henry Colerick represent the plaintiff and Hon. R. C. Bell, James M. Barrett and Sam Morris for the defendant. T. J. Logan is taking the testimony down in shorthand.

COL. JIM RICE.

The Hoosier Statesman Is Interviewed by a Sentinel Scribe.

Hon. James H. Rice, ex-auditor of the state, who is making a tour of Indiana in the interest of the democratic state central committee, looking after the work of organization in the different counties, was in the city today.

He was met by a SENTINEL reporter while here. "I have just come from Columbia City," he said, "and everything is in excellent shape for the democracy. Matters are working handsomely there now. The nomination of Mr. McNagny by the democracy of this district as candidate for congress, was a good one. He is one of the best speakers in the state, a man of ability and will make a strong canvass. His candidacy will add votes to the state ticket in this district."

"How is our state ticket?" asked THE SENTINEL.

"Everywhere I have been the democrats are well pleased with it. Claude Matthews' nomination for governor is received with favor in all parts of the state, pleasing the farmers and all other classes of people. The state ticket is one that will win in November."

"Who will the republicans nominate at Minneapolis next week?" was asked.

"Harrison, I think. He has the party machinery at his back, and, although a good deal of Blaine talk is being indulged in, I expect to see the president pull through all right at the convention. He is the favorite among the republicans at Indianapolis by long odds."

Colonel Rice left at noon for Auburn. He will spend Sunday in this city, and be at Albion on Monday and at Logansport on Tuesday of next week. He is one of the leading democrats of the state, and is doing much good for the party.

The regular monthly meeting of the Eighth Ward Democratic club will occur on Monday evening at headquarters on Maumee avenue.

WEDDING GOSSIP.

A. M. Tower Will Marry Miss Annie I. Smith—The Meyer-Wellman and the Wallace-Gilbert Weddings.

Next Sunday A. M. Tower, familiarly addressed as "Mac" by his intimate acquaintances, will leave Fort Wayne for Springfield, Ill., where he will next Wednesday be united in marriage to Miss Anna I. Smith, an accomplished young lady of the latter city. After the wedding ceremony the bride and groom will take a wedding tour, which will include a boat ride from Chicago to Cleveland, via Sault Ste. Marie. From Cleveland the couple will go to Buffalo, Niagara Falls, New York, Philadelphia and Pittsburg, stopping a short time in each city. They expect to arrive in Fort Wayne about the 22d inst. Mr. Tower owns the handsome residence property at 96 East Wayne street and will occupy it. The groom elect is the well known Pittsburg merchant, while the bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Smith, former residents of this city, where the gentleman was employed in the Wabash machine shops. He now holds a similar position in the company's works at Springfield.

J. H. Meyer and Miss Emma Wellman were married at 7 o'clock last evening at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. Gross officiating. Only the relatives and most intimate friends of the bride and groom witnessed the ceremony. A brilliant reception followed the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Meyer will at once go to housekeeping at the corner of Main and Ewing streets. Mr. Meyers, the fortunate groom, is the proprietor of the Arcade candy kitchen.

A pleasant wedding party assembled last evening at the home of Mrs. J. Gilbert, 296 West Washington street, the occasion being the marriage of Miss Jennie M. Kiddie to Mr. Robert Wallace, of Mount Pleasant, Pa. At 6 o'clock the wedding march was played by Miss Gilbert, and the affianced entered the parlor, which had been tastefully decorated for the event. Rev. J. S. Amsbie performed the ceremony, and Mr. and Mrs. Wallace were presented to the company. Refreshments were served, and elegant presents that had been brought by the friends, were hastily packed in the trunk, and the bride and groom left on the 7:30 train over the Pittsburg road for Mount Pleasant, the future home. Miss Kiddie is a most excellent young woman and carries with her the best wishes of a large circle of friends. James Wallace is a successful engineer at Mount Pleasant.

THEY SWINDLED.

A Pair of Bucket Shop Brokers Who Defrauded Customers.

PARIS, June 3.—A sensation has been caused in speculative circles by the news that Blondet & Garnier, outside or what in America would be known as bucket shop brokers, have defaulted. The exact amount due to their customers is not ascertained, and is not likely to be, as many who deal with them would hardly care to have the fact known. It is believed, however, that the loss is considerable. The place was largely a resort for lady speculators, both of the reputable and disreputable classes, and they were looked upon heretofore as dealing fairly with their patrons. The defalcation is being investigated and may result in criminal proceedings.

Later information goes to show that the defalcation of Blondet and Garnier is a very serious affair, and that large sums entrusted to them for speculation have disappeared. One woman who had entrusted her earnings to the firm for speculative purposes is a well-known member of the demi-monde who has concluded to reform, much to the disappointment of a number of admirers, and to what she had saved. She is now left penniless. A leading government official is among the losers to a large amount. The affairs of the firm are in such a condition that it will take some time to balance the books. Several complaints have already been stated, been made public to the police, and it is said that the latter are taking steps to prosecute.

THEY WERE MARRIED.

William Dupont Weds Mrs. Annie Zinn in London.

WILMINGTON, Del., June 3.—A cable received here yesterday announced the marriage of Millionaire Powder Manufacturer William Dupont to Mrs. Annie R. Zinn in London on Monday last. The message created a stir here as both the bride and groom have only been recently divorced from their wife and husband respectively. The bride is from one of the oldest and wealthiest families in the state. It is thought that Mr. and Mrs. Dupont will permanently reside in London.

Fire on a Vessel.

NEW YORK, June 3.—A fire was discovered early this morning in the hold of the St. Pancras, leading at Downs stores, Brooklyn, for Liverpool, and was not subdued until the hold was flooded with water. The loss is about $50,000. Three firemen were rendered unconscious by the smoke but soon recovered.

Deaths From Heat.

NEW YORK, June 3.—The oppressive weather of the past few days continues. At the coroner's office this morning official notice was received of the death of four men and three children from the heat of yesterday. At noon the thermometer registered 80 degrees.

Judge Morris and T. A. Randall have returned from Warsaw, where they went on legal business.

Many of the newspaper pencil pushers for the Minneapolis convention passed through the city last night.

Children's day, a happy event for the young people, will be observed in some of our city churches next Sunday.

The republican state convention, which meets here on the 28th of this month will bring to Fort Wayne 1,450 delegates from the various counties and many more persons who will come as spectators.

All eyes are turned just now toward Minneapolis. The republicans want to know who is to be their leader in the great political battle of this year, and the democrats desire to see who they will beat in November.

The Grand Rapids Democrat, edited by I. M. Weston, for many years chairman of the Michigan democratic state committee, publishes an editorial proposing Chief Justice Morse of Michigan as a candidate for vice president at Chicago.

Bill Nye's definition of a newspaper is as follows: "It is a library. It is an encyclopedia, a poem, a history, a dictionary, a time table, a romance, a guide to political reading, a ground plan of the civilized world, a low-priced multum in parvo. It is a sermon, a song, a circus, an obituary, a shipwreck, a symphony in solid brevier, a medley of life and death, a grand aggregation of man's glory and his shame. It is, in short, a bird's eye view of all the magnanimity and meanness, the joys and sorrows, births and deaths, the pride and poverty of the world, all for a few cents."

The "compound oxygen drunk" is the latest Boston craze. There are a half-dozen establishments in the Hub that are doing a rushing business in catering to this form of dissipation. They are patronized exclusively by men and women of the highest social position, the women outnumbering the men. The sensation produced by the inhalation of compound oxygen is described by those who have tried it as ecstatic. There is nothing known to the science of medicine or pharmacy that equals its delights. Big quaffs of it that fill the lungs' air cells are said to set all the nerves of the body a tingle and the brain in a delirious whirl. The effect lasts all the way from five minutes to an hour, according to the person, and is said to have no apparent deleterious results, except a peculiar mental collapse, from which the dissipator doesn't recover for several hours. While under the strange influence of the stuff one feels completely lost to the world and oblivious to everything terrestrial. That is the reason it is called the compound oxygen drunk.

Almost the last thing done by the general assembly of the Presbyterian church at their session at Portland Oregon was the adoption of the following resolution: "The general assembly would remind all under its care that it is a fundamental doctrine that the old and New Testaments are the inspired and infallible word of God. Our church holds that the inspired word as it came from God is without error. The assertion of the contrary can not but shake the confidence of the people in the sacred books. All who enter office in our churches solemnly promise to receive them as the only infallible rule of faith and practice. If they change their belief on this point, Christian honor demands that they should withdraw from our ministry. They have no right to use the pulpit or the chair of the professor for the dissemination of their errors until they are ruled out by the slow process of discipline. The Presbyteries should speedily interpose and deal with them for violation of a vow taken at the beginning that is obligatory until the party taking it is honorably and properly released from it. The council's ... upon all its ministers, elders and Presbyteries to be faithful to the duty that this imposes on them."

THE SCARLET LETTER.

By NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE.

The minister started to his feet, gasping for breath and clutching at his heart as if he would have torn it out of his bosom.

"Ha! What sayest thou?" cried he. "An enemy! and under mine own roof! What mean you?"

Hester Prynne was now fully sensible of the deep injury for which she was responsible to this unhappy man in permitting him to lie for so many years, or, indeed, for a single moment, at the mercy of one whose purposes could not be other than malevolent. The very contiguity of his enemy, beneath whatever mask the latter might conceal himself, was enough to disturb the magnetic sphere of a being so sensitive as Arthur Dimmesdale. There had been a period when Hester was less alive to this consideration; or perhaps in the misanthropy of her own trouble she left the minister to bear what she might picture to herself as a more tolerable doom. But of late, since the night of his vigil, all her sympathies toward him had been both softened and invigorated. She now read his heart more accurately. She doubted not that the continual presence of Roger Chillingworth—the secret poison of his malignity, infecting all the air about him—and his authorized interference as a physician with the minister's physical and spiritual infirmities—that these bad opportunities had been turned to a cruel purpose. By means of them the sufferer's conscience had been kept in an irritated state, the tendency of which was not to cure by wholesome pain, but to disorganize and corrupt his spiritual being. Its result on earth could hardly fail to be insanity, and hereafter that eternal alienation from the good and true, of which madness is perhaps the earthly type.

Such was the ruin to which she had brought the man once—nay, why should we not speak it?—still so passionately loved! Hester felt that the sacrifice of the clergyman's good name, and death itself, as she had already told Roger Chillingworth, would have been infinitely preferable to the alternative which she had taken upon herself to choose. And now, rather than have had this grievous wrong to confess, she would gladly have lain down on the forest leaves and died there at Arthur Dimmesdale's feet.

"O Arthur," cried she, "forgive me! In all things else I have striven to be true! Truth was the one virtue which I might have held fast, and did hold fast through all extremity, save when thy good, thy life, thy fame, were put in question! Then I consented to a deception. But a lie is never good, even though death threaten on the other side! Dost thou not see what I would say? That old man, the physician—he whom they call Roger Chillingworth—he was my husband!"

The minister looked at her for an instant with all the violence of passion which—intermixed, in more shapes than one, with his higher, purer, softer qualities—was, in fact, the portion of him which the devil claimed and through which he sought to win the rest. Never was there a blacker or a fiercer frown than Hester now encountered. For the brief space that it lasted it was a dark transfiguration. But his character had been so much enfeebled by suffering that even its lower energies were incapable of more than a temporary struggle. He sank down on the ground and buried his face in his hands.

"I might have known it," murmured he. "I did know it! Was not the secret told me in the natural recoil of my heart at the first sight of him, and as often as I have seen him since? Why did I not understand? O Hester Prynne, thou little, little knowest all the horror of this thing! And the shame!—the indelicacy!—the horrible ugliness of this exposure of a sick and guilty heart to the very eye that would gloat over it! Woman, woman, thou art accountable for this! I cannot forgive thee!"

"Thou shalt forgive me!" cried Hester, flinging herself on the fallen leaves beside him. "Let God punish! Thou shalt forgive!"

With sudden and desperate tenderness she threw her arms around him and pressed his head against her bosom, little caring though his cheek rested on the scarlet letter. He would have released himself, but strove in vain to do so. Hester would not set him free lest he should look her sternly in the face. All the world had frowned on her—for seven long years had it frowned upon this lonely woman—and still she bore it all, nor ever once turned away her firm, sad eyes. Heaven likewise had frowned upon her and she had not died. But the frown of this pale, weak, sinful and sorrow stricken man was what Hester could not bear and live.

"Wilt thou yet forgive me?" she repeated over and over again. "Wilt thou not frown? Wilt thou forgive?"

"I do forgive you, Hester," replied the minister at length, with a deep utterance out of an abyss of sadness, but no anger. "I freely forgive you now. May God forgive us both! We are not, Hester, the worst sinners in the world. There is one worse than even the polluted priest. That old man's revenge has been blacker than my sin. He has violated, in cold blood, the sanctity of a human heart. Thou and I, Hester, never did so."

"Never, never!" whispered she. "What we did had a consecration of its own. We felt it so! We said so to each other! Hast thou forgotten it?"

"Hush, Hester!" said Arthur Dimmesdale, rising from the ground. "No; I have not forgotten!"

They sat down again, side by side and hand clasped in hand, on the mossy trunk of the fallen tree. Life had never brought them a gloomier hour. It was the point whither their pathway had so long been tending and darkening ever as it stole along, and yet it inclosed a charm that made them linger upon it and claim another and another and after all another moment. The forest was obscure around them and creaked with a blast that was passing through it. The boughs were tossing heavily above their heads while one solemn old tree groaned dolefully to another, as if telling the sad story of the pair that sat beneath or constrained to forebode evil to come.

And yet they lingered. How dreary looked the forest track that led backward to the settlement, where Hester Prynne must take up again the burden of her ignominy and the minister the hollow mockery of his good name. So they lingered an instant longer. No golden light had ever been so precious as the gloom of this dark forest. Here, seen only by his eyes, the scarlet letter need not burn into the bosom of the fallen woman! Here, seen only by her eyes, Arthur Dimmesdale, false to God and man, might be for one moment true!

He started at a thought that suddenly occurred to him.

"Hester," cried he, "here is a new horror! Roger Chillingworth knows your purpose to reveal his true character. Will he continue, then, to keep our secret? What will now be the course of his revenge?"

"There is a strange secrecy in his nature," replied Hester thoughtfully, "and it has grown upon him by the hidden practices of his revenge. I deem it not likely that he will betray the secret. He will doubtless seek other means of satiating his dark passion."

"And I! how am I to live longer, breathing the same air with this deadly enemy?" exclaimed Arthur Dimmesdale, shrinking within himself and pressing his hand nervously against his heart, a gesture that had grown involuntary with him. "Think for me, Hester! Thou art strong. Resolve for me!"

"Thou must dwell no longer with this man," said Hester slowly and firmly. "Thy heart must be no longer under his evil eye!"

"It were far worse than death!" replied the minister. "But how to avoid it? What choice remains to me? Shall I lie down again on these withered leaves, where I cast myself when thou didst tell me what he was? Must I sink down there and die at once?"

"Alas, what a ruin has befallen thee!" said Hester with the tears gushing into her eyes. "Wilt thou die for very weakness? There is no other cause!"

"The judgment of God is on me," answered the conscience stricken priest. "It is too mighty for me to struggle with!"

"Heaven would show mercy," rejoined Hester, "hadst thou but the strength to take advantage of it."

"Be thou strong for me!" answered he. "Advise me what to do."

"Is the world, then, so narrow?" exclaimed Hester Prynne, fixing her deep eyes on the minister's and instinctively exercising a magnetic power over a spirit so shattered and subdued that it could hardly hold itself erect. "Doth the universe lie within the compass of yonder town, which only a little time ago was but a leaf-strewn desert, as lonely as this around us? Whither leads yonder forest track? Backward to the settlement, thou sayest! Yes, but onward too. Deeper it goes and deeper into the wilderness, less plainly to be seen at every step, until some few miles hence the yellow leaves will show no vestige of the white man's tread. There thou art free! So brief a journey would bring thee from a world where thou hast been most wretched to one where thou mayest still be happy! Is there not shade enough in all this boundless forest to hide thy heart from the gaze of Roger Chillingworth?"

"Then there is the broad pathway of the sea!" continued Hester. "It brought thee hither. If thou so choose, it will bear thee back again. In our native land, whether in some remote rural village or in vast London—or surely in Germany, in France, in pleasant Italy—thou wouldst be beyond his power and knowledge! And what hast thou to do with all these iron men and their opinions? They have kept thy better part in bondage too long already!"

"It cannot be!" answered the minister, listening as if he were called upon to realize a dream. "I am powerless to go! Wretched and sinful as I am, I have had no other thought than to drag on my earthly existence in the sphere where Providence hath placed me. Lost as my soul is, I would still do what I may for other human souls! I dare not quit my post, though an unfaithful sentinel, whose sure reward is death and dishonor, when his dreary watch shall come to an end!"

"Thou art crushed under this seven years' weight of misery," replied Hester, fervently resolved to buoy him up with her own energy. "But thou shalt leave it all behind thee! It shall not cumber thy steps, as thou treadest along the forest path; neither shalt thou freight the ship with it, if thou prefer to cross the sea. Leave this wreck and ruin here where it hath happened. Meddle no more with it! Begin all anew! Hast thou exhausted possibility in the failure of this one trial? Not so! The future is yet full of trial and success. There is happiness to be enjoyed! There is good to be done! Exchange this false life of thine for a true one. Be, if the spirit summon thee to such a mission, the teacher and apostle of the red men. Or—as is more thy nature—be a scholar and a sage among the wisest and most renowned of the cultivated world. Preach! Write! Act! Do anything, save to lie down and die! Give up this name of Arthur Dimmesdale and make thyself another, and a high one, such as thou canst wear without fear or shame. Why shouldst thou tarry so much as one other day in the torments that have so gnawed into thy life!—that have made thee feeble to will and to do!—that will leave thee powerless even to repent! Up and away!"

"O Hester!" cried Arthur Dimmesdale, in whose eyes a fitful light, kindled by her enthusiasm, flashed up and died away, "thou tellest of running a race to a man whose knees are tottering beneath him! I must die here! There is not the strength or courage left me to venture into the wide, strange, difficult world alone!"

It was the last expression of the despondency of a broken spirit. He lacked energy to grasp the better fortune that seemed within his reach.

He repeated the word.

"Alone, Hester!"

"Thou shalt not go alone!" answered she in a deep whisper.

Then all was spoken!

CHAPTER XIII.

A FLOOD OF SUNSHINE.

Arthur Dimmesdale gazed into Hester's face with a look in which hope and joy shone out indeed, but with fear betwixt them, and a kind of horror at her boldness, who had spoken what he vaguely hinted at, but dared not speak.

But Hester Prynne, with a mind of native courage and activity, and for so long a period not merely estranged, but outlawed, from society, had habituated herself to such latitude of speculation as was altogether foreign to the clergyman. She had wandered, without rule or guidance, in a moral wilderness; as vast, as intricate and shadowy as the untamed forest, amid the gloom of which they were now holding a colloquy that was to decide their fate. Her intellect and heart had their home as it were, in desert places, where she roamed as freely as the wild Indian in his woods.

For years past she had looked from this estranged point of view at human institutions, and whatever priests or legislators had established; criticising all with hardly more reverence than the Indian would feel for the clerical band, the judicial robe, the pillory, the gallows, the fireside or the church. The tendency of her fate and fortunes had been to set her free. The scarlet letter was her passport into regions where other women dared not tread. Shame, despair, solitude! These had been her teachers—stern and wild ones—and they had made her strong, but taught her much amiss.

The minister, on the other hand, had never gone through an experience calculated to lead him beyond the scope of generally received laws; although, in a single instance, he had so fearfully transgressed one of the most sacred of them. * * *

Thus we seem to see that, as regarded Hester Prynne, the whole seven years of outlaw and ignominy had been little other than a preparation for this very hour. But Arthur Dimmesdale! Were such a man once more to fall, what plea could be urged in extenuation of his crime? None; unless it avail him somewhat, that he was broken down by long and exquisite suffering; that his mind was darkened and confused by the very remorse which harrowed it, that, between fleeing as an avowed criminal and remaining as a hypocrite, conscience might find it hard to strike the balance; that it was human to avoid the peril of death and infamy and the inscrutable machinations of an enemy; that, finally to this poor pilgrim, on his dreary and desert path, faint, sick, miserable, there appeared a glimpse of human affection and sympathy, a new life and a true one, in exchange for the heavy doom which he was now expiating. And be the stern and sad truth spoken, that the breach which guilt has once made into the human soul is never in this mortal state repaired. It may be watched and guarded; so that the enemy shall not force his way again into the citadel, and might even in his subsequent assaults select some other avenue in preference to that where he had formerly succeeded. But there is still the ruined wall, and near it the stealthy tread of the foe that would win over again his unforgotten triumph.

The struggle, if there were one, need not be described. Let it suffice that the clergyman resolved to flee and not alone.

"If, in all these past seven years," thought he, "I could recall one instant of peace or hope, I would yet endure, for the sake of that earnest of heaven's mercy. But now, since I am irrevocably doomed—wherefore should I not snatch the solace allowed to the condemned culprit before his execution? Or, if this be the path to a better life, as Hester would persuade me, I surely give up no fairer prospect by pursuing it! Neither can I any longer live without her companionship; so powerful is she to sustain—so tender to soothe! O thou to whom I dare not lift mine eyes, wilt thou yet pardon me?"

"Thou wilt go!" said Hester calmly, as he met her glance.

The decision once made, a glow of strange enjoyment threw its flickering brightness over the trouble of his breast. It was the exhilarating effect—upon a prisoner just escaped from the dungeon of his own heart—of breathing the wild, free atmosphere of an unredeemed, unchristianized, lawless region. His spirit rose, as it were, with a bound, and attained a nearer prospect of the sky than throughout all the misery which had kept him groveling on the earth. Of a deeply religious temperament, there was inevitably a tinge of the devotional in his mood.

"Do I feel joy again?" cried he, wondering at himself. "Methought the germ of it was dead in me! O Hester, thou art my better angel! I seem to have flung myself—sick, sin stained and sorrow blackened—down upon these forest leaves, and to have risen up all made anew, and with new powers to glorify him that hath been merciful! This is already the better life! Why did we not find it sooner?"

"Let us not look back," answered Hester Prynne. "The past is gone! Wherefore should we linger upon it now? See! With this symbol I undo it all, and make it as it had never been!"

So speaking, she undid the clasp that fastened the scarlet letter, and taking it from her bosom threw it to a distance among the withered leaves. The mystic token alighted on the hither verge of the stream. With a hand's breadth farther flight it would have fallen into the water and have given the little brook another woe to carry onward, besides the unintelligible tale which it still kept murmuring about. But there lay the embroidered letter, glittering like a lost jewel, which some ill fated wanderer might pick up, and thenceforth be haunted by strange phantoms of guilt, sinkings of the heart and unaccountable misfortune.

The stigma gone Hester heaved a long, deep sigh, in which the burden of shame and anguish departed from her spirit. Oh, exquisite relief! She had not known the weight until she felt the freedom! By another impulse she took off the formal cap that confined her hair; and down it fell upon her shoulders, dark and rich, with at once a shadow and a light in its abundance, and imparting the charm of softness to her features. There played around her mouth and beamed out of her eyes a radiant and tender smile that seemed gushing from the very heart of womanhood. A crimson flush was glowing on her cheek that had been long so pale. Her sex, her youth and the whole richness of her beauty came back from what men call the irrevocable past, and clustered themselves with her maiden hope and a happiness before unknown within the magic circle of this hour.

And, as if the gloom of the earth and sky had been but the effluence of these two mortal hearts, it vanished with their sorrow. All at once, as with a sudden smile of heaven, forth burst the sunshine, pouring a very flood into the obscure forest, gladdening each green leaf, transmuting the yellow fallen ones to gold and gleaming adown the gray trunks of the solemn trees. The objects that had made a shadow hitherto embodied the brightness now. The course of the little brook might be traced by its merry gleam afar into the wood's heart of mystery, which had become a mystery of joy.

Such was the sympathy of nature—that wild, heathen nature of the forest, never subjugated by human law, nor illumined by higher truth—with the bliss of these two spirits! Love, whether newly born or aroused from a deathlike slumber, must always create a sunshine, filling the heart so full of radiance that it overflows upon the outward world. Had the forest still kept its gloom it would have been bright in Hester's eyes, and bright in Arthur Dimmesdale's!

Hester looked at him with the thrill of another joy.

"Thou must know Pearl!" said she. "Our little Pearl! Thou hast seen her—yes, I know it—but thou wilt see her now with other eyes. She is a strange child. I hardly comprehend her. But thou wilt love her dearly as I do, and wilt advise me how to deal with her."

"Dost thou think the child will be glad to know me?" asked the minister somewhat uneasily. "I have long shrunk from children because they often show a distrust—a backwardness to be familiar with me. I have even been afraid of little Pearl."

"Ah, that was sad!" answered the mother. "But she will love thee dearly and thou her. She is not far off. I will call her! Pearl! Pearl!"

"I see the child," observed the minister. "Yonder she is, standing in a streak of sunshine, a good way off on the other side of the brook. So thou thinkest the child will love me?"

Hester smiled and again called to Pearl, who was visible at some distance, as the minister had described her, like a bright appareled vision in a sunbeam, which fell down upon her through an arch of boughs. The ray quivered to and fro making her figure dim or distinct—now a real child, now like a child's spirit—as the splendor went and came again. She heard her mother's voice and approached slowly through the forest.

Pearl had not found the hour pass wearisomely while her mother sat talking with the clergyman. The great black forest—stern as it showed itself to those who brought the guilt and troubles of the world into its bosom—became the playmate of the lonely infant as well as it knew how. Somber as it was it put on the kindest of its moods to welcome her. * * *

And she was gentler here than in the grassy margined streets of the settlement or in her mother's cottage. The flowers seemed to know it, and one another whispered as she passed, "Adorn thyself with me, thou beautiful child; adorn thyself with me!" and to please them Pearl gathered the violets and anemones and columbines and some twigs of the freshest green, which the old trees held down before her eyes. With these she decorated her hair and her young waist, and became a nymph child, or an infant dryad, or whatever else was in closest sympathy with the antique wood. In such guise had Pearl adorned herself, when she heard her mother's voice and came slowly back.

Slowly, for she saw the clergyman.

CHAPTER XIV.

THE CHILD AT THE BROOKSIDE.

"Thou wilt love her dearly," repeated Hester Prynne, as she and the minister sat watching little Pearl. "Dost thou not think her beautiful? And see with what natural skill she has made those simple flowers adorn her! Had she gathered pearls and diamonds and rubies in the wood they could not have become her better. She is a splendid child! But I know whose brow she has!"

"Dost thou know, Hester," said Arthur Dimmesdale with an unquiet smile, "that this dear child, tripping about always at thy side, hath caused me many an alarm? Methought—Oh, Hester, what a thought is that, and how terrible to dread it!—that my own features were partly repeated in her face, and so strikingly that the world might see them! But she is mostly thine!"

"No, no! Not mostly!" answered the mother, with a tender smile. "A little longer and thou needest not to be afraid to trace whose child she is. But how strangely beautiful she looks, with those wild flowers in her hair! It is as if one of the fairies, whom we left in our dear old England, had decked her out to meet us."

It was with a feeling which neither of them had ever before experienced that they sat and watched Pearl's slow advance. In her was visible the tie that united them. She had been offered to the world these seven years past as the living hieroglyphic, in which was revealed the secret they so darkly sought to hide—all written in this symbol—all plainly manifest—had there been a prophet or magician skilled to read the character of flame! And Pearl was the oneness of their being. Be the foregone evil what it might, how could they doubt that their earthly lives and future destinies were conjoined, when they beheld at once the material union and the spiritual idea in whom they met and were to dwell immortally together? Thoughts like these—and perhaps other thoughts, which they did not acknowledge or define—threw an awe about the child as she came onward.

"Let her see nothing strange—no passion nor eagerness—in thy way of accosting her," whispered Hester. "Our Pearl is a fitful and fantastic little elf sometimes. Especially, she is seldom tolerant of emotion, when she does not fully comprehend the why and wherefore. But the child hath strong affections! She loves me and will love thee!"

"Thou canst not think," said the minister, glancing aside at Hester Prynne, "how my heart dreads this interview and yearns for it! But in truth, as I already told thee, children are not readily won to be familiar with me. They will not climb my knee, nor prattle in my ear, nor answer to my smile; but stand apart and eye me strangely. Even little babes, when I take them in my arms, weep bitterly. Yet Pearl twice in her little lifetime hath been kind to me! The first time—thou knowest it well! The last was when thou ledst her with thee to the house of yonder stern old governor."

"And thou didst plead so bravely in her behalf and mine!" answered the mother. "I remember it, and so shall little Pearl. Fear nothing! She may be strange and shy at first, but will soon learn to love thee!"

By this time Pearl had reached the margin of the brook, and stood on the farther side, gazing silently at Hester and the clergyman, who still sat together on the mossy tree trunk, waiting to receive her. Just where she had paused the brook chanced to form a pool, so smooth and quiet that it reflected a perfect image of her little figure, with all the brilliant picturesqueness of her beauty, in its adornment of flowers and wreathed foliage, but more refined and spiritualized than the reality.

This image, so nearly identical with the living Pearl, seemed to communicate somewhat of its own shadowy and intangible quality to the child herself. It was strange, the way in which Pearl stood, looking so steadfastly at them through the dim medium of the forest gloom; herself, meanwhile, all glorified with a ray of sunshine that was attracted thitherward as by a certain sympathy. In the brook beneath stood another child—another and the same—with likewise its ray of golden light. Hester felt herself, in some indistinct and tantalizing manner, estranged from Pearl; as if the child, in her lonely ramble through the forest, had strayed out of the sphere in which she and her mother dwelt together, and was now vainly seeking to return to it.

There was both truth and error in the impression; the child and mother were estranged, but through Hester's fault, not Pearl's. Since the latter rambled from her side another inmate had been admitted within the circle of the mother's feelings, and so modified the aspect of them all that Pearl, the returning wanderer, could not find her wonted place, and hardly knew where she was.

"I have a strange fancy," observed the sensitive minister, "that this brook is the boundary between two worlds, and thou canst never meet thy Pearl again. Or is she an elfish spirit, who, as the legends of our childhood taught us, is forbidden to cross a running stream? Pray hasten her, for this delay has already imparted a tremor to my nerves."

"Come, dearest child!" said Hester encouragingly, and stretching out both her arms. "How slow thou art! When hast thou been so sluggish before now? Here is a friend of mine, who must be thy friend also. Thou wilt have twice as much love henceforward as thy mother alone could give thee! Leap across the brook and come to us. Thou canst leap like a young deer!"

Pearl, without responding in any manner to these honey sweet expressions, remained on the other side of the brook. Now she fixed her bright, wild eyes on her mother, now on the minister, and now included them both in the same glance, as if to detect and explain to herself the relation which they bore to one another. For some unaccountable reason, as Arthur Dimmesdale felt the child's eyes upon himself, his hand—with that gesture so habitual as to have become involuntary—stole over his heart. At length, assuming a singular air of authority, Pearl stretched out her hand, with the small forefinger extended and pointing evidently toward her mother's breast. And beneath, in the mirror of the brook, there was the flower girdled and sunny image of little Pearl pointing her small forefinger too.

"Thou strange child, why dost thou not come to me?" exclaimed Hester.

Pearl still pointed with her forefinger, and a frown gathered on her brow—the more impressive from the childish, the almost babylike aspect of the features that conveyed it. As her mother still kept beckoning to her, and arraying her face in a holiday suit of unaccustomed smiles, the child stamped her foot with a yet more imperious look and gesture. In the brook again was the fantastic beauty of the image, with its reflected frown, its pointed finger and imperious gesture, giving emphasis to the aspect of little Pearl.

"Hasten, Pearl, or I shall be angry with thee!" cried Hester Prynne, who, however inured to such behavior on the elf child's part at other seasons, was naturally anxious for a more seemly deportment now. "Leap across the brook, naughty child, and run hither! Else I must come to thee!"

But Pearl, not a whit startled at her mother's threats, any more than mollified by her entreaties, now suddenly burst into a fit of passion, gesticulating violently and throwing her small figure into the most extravagant contortions. She accompanied this wild outbreak with piercing shrieks, which the woods reverberated on all sides; so that, alone as she was in her childish and unreasonable wrath, it seemed as if a hidden multitude were lending her their sympathy and encouragement. Seen in the brook once more was the shadowy wraith of Pearl's image, crowned and girdled with flowers, but stamping its foot, wildly gesticulating, and in the midst of all still pointing its small forefinger at Hester's bosom!

"I see what ails the child," whispered Hester to the clergyman, and turning pale in spite of a strong effort to conceal her trouble and annoyance. "Children will not abide any, the slightest, change in the accustomed aspect of things that are daily before their eyes. Pearl misses something which she has always seen me wear!"

PINKHAM'S . PROVERBIAL . PHILOSOPHY . . .

A woman best understands a woman's ills.

At the age of fifty, Mrs. Pinkham publicly commenced her great work of helping such women as could not help themselves. Having devoted her life to the study of female complaints she discovered that a large proportion of the diseases of women have a common origin and may have a common cure. That cure she created, and named Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and how honest was her purpose and trustworthy her judgment is plainly indicated by thousands of such thankful letters as this:

DEAR MADAM,— . . . Would that I could induce all suffering women to give your Compound a fair trial. I must say to you that it is an invaluable medicine. It has been very beneficial to myself and daughter.—MRS. S. BLAIR, Roanoke City, Va.

Druggists sell it as a standard article, or sent by mail, in form of Pills or Lozenges, on receipt of $1.00.
An illustrated book, entitled "Guide to Health and Etiquette," by Lydia E. Pinkham, is of great value to ladies. We will present a copy to anyone addressing us with two 2 cent stamps.

The "Railroad Black List," or, as it is more politely called, "Confidential Memorandum," has been received for 1892 by the local officials. This is a list of persons who have abused the pass privilege and who are, therefore, not in a position to receive any favors from the railroad companies. On the list are 1,000 persons and 250 newspapers. The name, residence and business of the individuals are given and also the cause of their black-listing. When these people travel they pay their fare or—walk.

Yesterday, just after local freight No. 31, east-bound, Engineer Joe Brocht at the throttle, had passed Green Springs station, a team in which were an old man named David Kestlan, a farmer, and his daughter attempted to cross the track ahead of the engine. The train was running at the rate of thirty-five miles an hour and it struck the buggy with terrible force, knocking it into kindling wood. When Engineer Brocht brought his train to a standstill it was discovered that the old man had been killed instantly and his daughter had suffered what may yet prove to be fatal injuries.

'TIS THE STEEL AGE.

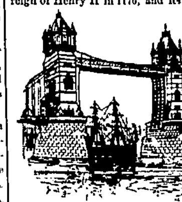

SOME OF THE WONDERS OF MODERN BRIDGE BUILDING.

The Great Structure Soon to Span the Historic River Thames—Other Bridges of Note to Be Found in England and America.

It has been tritely said that while the art of bridge-building is ancient and the science of bridge building is modern, the skill of the present engineer has become the special flower and glory of our age of steel.

The earliest timber bridge on record is that which was thrown over the Rhine by Julius Cæsar; but long ages before the Chinese built stone bridges of great magnitude and first introduced in their construction the principle of the arch. One of these is four miles long, seventy feet high and has 300 arches. The Romans followed, and nothing in the way of modern bridges up to fifty years ago equaled the one built by the Emperor Trajan, A. D. 104, over the Danube. During the last two centuries some very beautiful bridges have been erected in France, and in Venice there are no fewer than 339.

In Great Britain the art kept pace with its progress on the Continent, the most ancient bridge being that at Croyland, Lincolnshire, said to have been built in 860. The bridge over the Trent at Burton, in Staffordshire, was built in the Twelfth century. It was 1,545 feet long. Old London bridge was begun in the reign of Henry II in 1176, and its erection occupied eighty-three years. After having served its purpose more than 650 years it gave place to the present structure, which was begun in 1824 and finished in 1831. This is but one of sixteen of the finest architectural works of their kind in the world that span the Thames.

THE TOWER BRIDGE.

The first metal bridge in England was erected in 1779 over the Severn, and it is a curious circumstance that Thomas Paine was a successful contriver of an iron bridge, which in 1787 he proposed to construct without any iron piers over the Schuylkill in Philadelphia, as the stream was apt to be choked with ice in the spring freshets. His backers becoming bankrupt, however, the structure was not finished and the materials were used in England. This work was long regarded as a great triumph of art, its span being 236 feet long with a rise of 34 feet.

Suspension bridges were erected in America as early as 1796 by a Mr. Finlay, who in 1801 took out a patent, and in 1811 eight bridges had been built on his plan. Subsequently, in 1826, a chain cable suspension bridge was built across the Straits of Menai, which until then formed a troublesome obstruction upon the great road from London to Dublin. Many beautiful suspension bridges have since been erected in Great Britain and on the Continent. The most remarkable wire suspension bridge in Europe, on account of its dimensions and height, is that of Freyburg, in Switzerland, which has a span from pier to pier of 870 feet and is suspended at the height of 167 feet above the river which flows under it.

One of the most wonderful achievements of engineering art is the steel bridge across the Firth of Forth, in Scotland. It has the longest span, the greatest weight and the greatest length of any yet built.

The structure shown in the illustration, which thousands of workmen are now hurrying to completion, will be known as the Tower bridge, inasmuch as it will cross the Thames near the Tower of London. It is one of the most remarkable undertakings of the kind in existence, spanning as it does what is perhaps the busiest waterway on earth. The peculiarity of its construction consists in two huge leaves weighing 950 tons, each of which is raised and lowered to a level thirty feet above high water, somewhat after the manner of an ancient drawbridge, thus affording passage for river craft. They are shown in the cut open. A hundred feet above this bridge level is another roadway for the accommodation of foot passengers, who are to be lifted to it in elevators running through the towers whenever the lower portion of the bridge is open and travel is impeded. The cost will be $3,500,000.

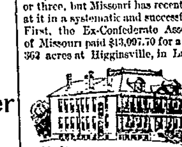

A project is now under discussion for spanning the Hudson river with steel wire suspension cables that will support a highway fifteen feet loftier than the great Brooklyn bridge and large enough to accommodate six lines of railroad. Its span, as contemplated by the engineers, will be 2,850 feet long and 150 feet above the water. Compared with the Brooklyn bridge its length, including anchorage, will be 6,500 feet; the former measures 3,700 feet. Each anchorage of the North River bridge will weigh 600,000 tons, while that of the Brooklyn bridge weighs only 60,000 tons. The cost is roughly estimated at $16,000,000.

Among other suspension bridges in the United States is that at Wheeling, which has a span of 1,010 feet; at Niagara, with a span of 821 feet and a roadway 250 feet from the line of the river; at Pittsburg, with a span of 1,345 feet; at Cincinnati, with a total length of 2,220 feet and a span of 1,057 feet. Other examples of advanced bridge architecture and engineering are to be found in many other sections of the country, and the improvements continually made show that American skill is fully abreast of that of any other people in the world.

FOR SOUTHERN SOLDIERS.

A Home for Ex-Confederates to Be Established in Missouri.

Confederate homes have been suggested in every southern state, and something in that line has been done in two or three, but Missouri has recently gone at it in a systematic and successful way. First, the Ex-Confederate Association of Missouri paid $13,097.70 for a farm of 362 acres at Higginsville, in Lafayette county, twelve miles from Lexington, and expended nearly as much more for repair and erection of buildings. The cottage system was adopted, and in a very short time the capacity of the place was exhausted.

THE PROPOSED STRUCTURE.

Mrs. A. C. Cassidy, a prominent member of the Daughters of the Confederacy, then started a movement to raise a fund for a main building, and a large amount is already collected. The ladies now propose to get $100 in each school district, which, with the amount already collected, will enable them to carry out the plans. Mr. J. B. Legg, whose wife is active among the Daughters aforesaid, has furnished the plan.

The building is to be in the Colonial style of architecture, so common in the older parts of Virginia, with broad porches and verandas; the cost is to be $30,000. It is 96 by 115 feet, two stories high and in a double L, the wings opening upon an interior court in the rear. There will be general apartments for 120 inmates and separate rooms for forty others. It will be of brick, with stone trimmings and slate roof, the interior furnished throughout with wood Kitchen, laundry room, etc., will be in the basement. And finally it is to be opened to all who served in the Confederate army or navy and were residents of Missouri during the year 1890. Missourians of all parties have contributed liberally to the fund for endowing the institution, and it is declared to be an assured success.

SHELBY M. CULLOM.

A Washington gentleman, who is an admirer of the senior senator from Illinois, writes of him as follows:

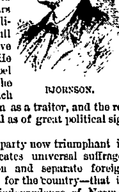

Mr. Cullom is somewhat noted for his resemblance to Abraham Lincoln. He has the same type of face, the same lank, thin body and the same characteristics. Like Lincoln, he is fond of telling stories, and, like Lincoln, he has a thousand quaint phrases and illustrations on his tongue's end. He is like Lincoln, too, in his simplicity, his hatred of sham and pretense, his sincere patriotism and inability to bear malice.

It was a weakness with Lincoln that he could not hold a grudge against any one. He was too quick to forgive his enemies and take them in as friends. Cullom is the same. Now and then he gets a saucy letter from some cranky constituent or disappointed politician. Cullom doesn't answer it. He files it away and keeps still. In three months or six, or perhaps a year, the offended man, coming to his senses and finding it impossible to pick a quarrel, writes and takes back what he had said before. Then the senator takes up his pen. "I didn't answer your letter," he usually says in such cases, "because I saw you were excited, and I wanted to give you a chance to cool off."

It is an odd coincidence that Illinois' two candidates for the presidency should live in the same town, almost within a stone's throw of each other, and that both should have come from Kentucky, as did that greatest son of Illinois, Abraham Lincoln. Both Palmer and Cullom were the sons of farmers in Kentucky who were attracted to Illinois in the early days by the tales of wealth from the prairie region. Both started out barefoot, both were governor of the state, both are in the senate, both hope to reach the White House.

A Poet in Politics.

Bjornstene Bjornson was long the people's poet of Norway, and in England and America he stood for the very incarnation of Scandinavian genius. He went into active politics, and he is so savagely denounced that he declares almost with tears that if not vindicated he will leave his native land forever. He has brought libel suits against the journals which denounced him as a traitor, and the result is regarded as of great political significance.

BJORNSON.

The radical party now triumphant in Norway advocates universal suffrage, direct taxation and separate foreign representation for the country—that is, the practical independence of Norway against its co-state Sweden. Bjornson was an active and powerful supporter of this policy, but when he went on to advocate that two harbors free of ice on the Norwegian coast be allowed to Russia for trade, he raised a fearful storm both in Norway and Sweden and scarcely less in Denmark and Germany. He is now practically driven out of a public career.

In his early life he was forced from Norway by the clamor over his course as editor of a political journal, and after several years in exile ventured back in 1862. He was born at Quikne, Oesterdal, Dec. 8, 1832, and despite his sixty-one years is still vigorous and active. He has renounced the pension of $100 a year allowed him as poet laureate and is, generally speaking, under a cloud.

Mr. Norman Lichty, Des Moines, Ia.:

Dear Sir—A sample of KRAUSE'S HEADACHE CAPSULES was left in my husband's office a few days since, and as I am subject to headaches—neuralgic, nervous, and in fact every other kind—he thoughtfully brought the sample box home. The very next day I had a chance to try them and one capsule relieved me in less than half an hour. Next day I was attacked again, took another capsule with the same delightful result, in less than half an hour my head felt as well as ever, with no bad feeling as the after result. I have had these terrible headaches for twenty years, and have tried every remedy I ever heard of, but nothing I have ever taken has cured or relieved me as QUICKLY as KRAUSE'S HEADACHE CAPSULES. MRS. N. A. SKINNER.

DEATH IN WATER.

The Millions of Dangers Water Contains and the Rapidity With Which They Increase—Don't Take Any Chances.

Few people have any idea how impure even the purest drinking water is. The very best water known is full of germs. They are the most prolific creatures of which we have any knowledge, for a single one may be the costive parent of more than sixteen million, five hundred thousand decendants in a day. They are also possessed of great vitality, for they can be carried great distances in water without losing their power of producing disease. They can be frozen or even boiled without being destroyed. They may be kept dried for years and yet when placed in suitable conditions will come to life and produce fermentation and decay. They are the great promoters of malaria, fever, grip and most serious diseases.

"But," you say, "what can be done to avoid them since they cannot be killed by boiling?" There is but one thing which will effectively destroy them and that is coming in contact with spirits. A small amount of pure spirits in the water will effectually kill them and destroy their evil effects, but it should be borne in mind that nothing but the purest and best spirits should be used for this purpose, and that nothing is equal to whiskey. Not the ordinary whiskies which are upon the market, but something far above them—something which is highly endorsed by the scientific world. Such a whiskey is Duffy's Pure Malt, which is, today, more popular than ever before in its history, and which is doing wonders to destroy the germs of every disease. There are hundreds of families that use it constantly in connection with the drinking water, both at the table and between meals. Beware of any druggist or grocer who seeks to offer you something he says is "just as good." Duffy's is the only pure medical whiskey upon the market.

THE NEW YORK STORE.

Dr. J. Sion Smith, of LaOtto, was in the city last evening. The doctor, who is an old Fort Waynite, says he will be glad to meet any of his friends and pilot them to a good fishing ground not far from the town he now makes his home.

The Seven club were entertained yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. R. G. Thompson. Mrs. J. R. Merriweather gave a historical reading and Mrs. C. B. Woodworth read a portion of the fifteenth book of the Iliad.

Miss Emily Griffin, teacher of art at the Home for Feeble Minded, has resigned and returned to her home at Springfield Ind. H. Gilbert, chaplain and teacher, has also resigned his position and will leave Monday for his home in Greensburg, Ind. Miss Lulu Mortis, of Indianapolis, has been engaged as instructor of gymnastics to succeed him.

Mrs. R Welker and Mrs Frank Welker, of Clyde, Ohio, are the guests of Mrs. J. J Mungen, of East Wayne street.

Gents' Furnishing Goods

Are an important feature with us and you will always find our styles the newest and our assortment the largest in the city.

If you expect to buy UNDERWEAR a little cheaper than you see it marked in haberdashers' windows; if you expect to buy FOUR-IN-HAND and made up NECKWEAR for 50c, that is sold in lots of places for 75c; if, in a word, you expect to get your FURNISHING GOODS this season a little under "market prices," we'll see that you're not disappointed if you come to us.

WHITE AND FANCY VESTS!

Between $1 and $5. We'll show you a variety of white and fancy VESTS that practically represent "the market." The double breasted vest is still in the lead, and so is our assortment.

How About Hats?

We sell the best quality DERBY HAT for $3.50, the identical quality retails for $5.00 in fashionable hat stores. There's no difference in shape or trimmings, either. The question is, what do you get for that extra $1.50? Our $2.00 hat is not quite so fine in material and trimmings, but you'd hardly know the difference. Its good enough for most men, and won't be any better if you buy it at a hat store and pay $3.00 for it.

MORE Novelties in BOYS' and LITTLE BOYS' HATS and CAPS than any other store in the city can show.

Sam, Pete & Max.

The new bridge spanning Shawnee run, on Broadway, is too narrow. The outside railing on the footpath strikes the center of the sidewalk, affording a splendid opportunity for pedestrians to tumble into the creek on dark nights. The sidewalks will be changed.

Will J. Hess, late stenographer at the postoffice, will leave for Denver, Col., tonight in search of health. He expects to accept, on his arrival there, a position as stenographer for a large firm. Mr. Hess leaves with the best wishes of all who know him, and especially the postoffice employes.

Street Commissioner Mungen and Councilman Buck discovered two teamsters yesterday afternoon in the act of hauling gravel from the city's pit. The men stated they were engaged to haul a number of loads out on Pontiac street. The street commissioner stopped them. The gravel pit is encroaching upon Jones street and a landslide, which would include a good slice of the thoroughfare, is threatened.

In an opinion yesterday Attorney General Smith notified Superintendent of Puplic Instruction Vories that an appeal from the enumeration of school children can only be taken before the limit set by law for the apportionment has expired. Professor Vories had received an inquiry from a county superintendent asking if an enumeration, regularly reported but erroneous, could not be reviewed. As May 15 is the limit of the law, the enumeration, by the attorney general's opinion, must stand.

NEW ARCHITECTS.

Chauncey Griffith and Barry Tolan to Embark in Business.

Negotiations are in progress for the transfer of the office of the late Harry Matson, architect, to Chauncey Griffith and Barry Tolan, two progressive young men of this city. Mr. Griffith is the son of Contractor Levi Griffith and has been for some years connected with Mr. Matson's office. Mr. Tolan has been engaged as draughtsman in the office of his brother, B. S. Hallo! Hallo!!

Give me Heine & Israel, the Broadway Paper Men. I am sick and tired looking at my dirty walls, when they are almost giving wall paper away. Give them to me quick. They are practical paper hangers and painters and I know they will do me a good job. They will go anywhere in Fort Wayne and Allen county and hang paper. Dont forget the place.

Are YOU Reading It?

We mean the famous story,

The Scarlet Letter,

by Nathaniel Hawthorne, which is now being published in these columns in serial form.

This masterpiece of fiction has enthralled countless thousands of readers in the days that are behind us.

It is old, yet ever new, and it has no counterpart in the literature of today.

Read it while it runs; it may not come this way again.

— THE —

BOSTON STORE.

You have no doubt read our advertisement describing the merits of the New Style Waterproof garments for Ladies.

THE MELISSA!

Well, as in our opinion, they will evidently drive rubber circulars and gossamers out of the market, we have made sweeping reductions in the prices of the latter, to reduce stock. Some that have become a trifle stiff in the folds have been reduced from $1.00, $1.50 and $2.00 to 50c, 75c and $1.00. Now is the time to buy cheap protection from rain.

Ask to see the Melissa garments also. We show them with pleasure.

Just received another 100 dozen of those famous 17c Hermsdorf Black Hose for ladies.

You should see our Ladies' Black lisle thread hose at 50c and 60c, also the Ladies' Fast Black Hose, Opera lengths, at 50c per pair, they are a curiosity at that price.

We have the best lines of Gentlemens' Lightweight Underwear in the city, ranging in prices from 25c to $1.

Don't forget our Lace Curtain department, also Window Shades, Curtain Poles, Sash rods, Chenille Portiers and Spreads.

LOOK AT THIS.

Beginning tomorrow morning we will place on sale 10 pieces Unbleached Sheeting, 9-4 wide at 17c per yd.; regular price 25c.

The same quality and width in Bleached Sheetings, at 19c per yard; regular price, 28c.

The same goods in 2¼ yards wide, at 2c per yard more.

The above sheetings are a job lot and bought accordingly at a reduction, which we give our patrons the benefit of, to counteract the effects of the wet weather, and to create a little stir.

There will be no more when this lot is closed out.
